NEW LUXURY OPS FOR PANAMA'S LAS PERLAS ISLANDS

New kid in town — the Pacific Provider offers anglers 160 feet of mothership and four game boats.

AN AREA OF PANAMA new to many anglers promises world-class action from a world-class mothership. The West Coast Fishing Club, based in British Columbia, has brought its 160-foot Pacific Provider to the southernmost Las Perlas Islands in the Gulf of Panama, about 100 miles southwest of Panama City. The six double-berth staterooms offer a flat-screen TV, air conditioning and wide-view windows. Anglers will find comfort throughout, says Brian Grange, vice president of WCFC, along with four fully equipped Strike sport-fishers. WCFC encourages catch-and-release fishing, in keeping with Panama's conservation ethic, Grange says. Guests who have the means to use it can land on a commercially certified helicopter deck. In 2012, the WCFC will open a luxurious, land-based Panama Resort here, on the southern end of Isla Del Rey. For more information, visit westcoastfishingclub.com.
